

Bedtime Stories For The Little Ones

UNCLE WIGGILY AND LULU'S CABBAGE.

By HOWARD GARIS.

"UNCLE WIGGILY, I wish you would go to the store for me and bring back a jug of vinegar," said Nurse Jane Fussy Wussy one morning.

"I shall be very glad to," answered the rabbit gentleman, as he gave his automobile a drink of gasoline. "But, speaking of vinegar, I hope you are not going to make pickled onions. I can stand almost anything except onions."

"I know it!" laughed Nurse Jane. "But don't worry! I am not going to pickle any onions. I want to make some pickled beets."

"Then it's all right," spoke Uncle Wiggily, with a sigh of relief. "I'll hurry right down to the store and get the vinegar for you, Nurse Jane."

In a little while Uncle Wiggily was ready, and away he started in his automobile, which had a turnip for a steering wheel, and big bologna sausages for tires.

You'll be proud of a well painted home. And if you are careful in selecting the paint, you'll feel proud of your good judgment. Good paint protects and beautifies a building—cheap paint does neither. And good paint is cheaper than "cheap."

DEVOE The Guaranteed Lead and Zinc Paint

When you paint with DEVOE you save paint-money—fewer gallons to buy; you save on labor—fewer gallons to spread; and you get a better looking job; and it will be a longer time before you need to paint again.

Make Your Own Book of Uncle Wiggily Pictures

Now what do you suppose?

The little boy or the little girl who makes the neatest, most attractive little booklets out of pictures cut from the Week-End Herald, gets six tickets to a picture show and can give a "movie party."

Take three sheets of paper, fold them in the middle and either paste the top or pin them together. You can use any kind of paper, maybe some of your mamma's nice note paper. It's big enough for just plain store paper. Have the pages about five inches long and three inches wide.

Then cut the Uncle Wiggily pictures in the Sunday paper out very carefully and paste them on the pages of your little book. Use a new page for every square in the picture page.

When you cut all the pages filled, except the front page and the back page, which you have left for the cover, take the top of the book. Wiggily paste and some of the pictures in the heading and decorate your cover.

Use the other pictures for the front cover for your name and address, which you must write plainly on the back of the book. You can use any picture you like. Mail your book to The Herald, care of the Feature department, and maybe, if you have done it very carefully, it will be the neatest one of all and you will get the six tickets for the moving picture show.

Uncle Wiggily, as he stopped his auto and listened. "Yes, it's trouble. But who is it? I don't know. I don't know it can be the Bunsen burner. I haven't any feathers, even if it's a white one. I'll take a peep and be ready to hurry away if it's the Pipsqueak, or any one like that."

Uncle Wiggily looked through the bushes, and to his surprise, he saw Lulu Wiggily, the nice duck girl, sitting beside a large head of cabbage.

"Why, Lulu! What's the matter?" asked the rabbit.

"The matter is that this cabbage head is too heavy for me to carry any farther," answered Lulu. "I want to send me to the store to get it, and I thought I could roll it home, when I saw how heavy it was. A lot of the leaves were cut off on sharp stones, and I knew mother wouldn't like that."

"So, I tried to carry the cabbage, only it's so heavy I can't."

"I could swim, and float it in the water ahead of me if the duck pond were here. But I don't and I don't know what to do," sighed poor Lulu.

"Well, I know what to do! Laughed Uncle Wiggily. Just get in my auto and I'll ride you, and the cabbage head, to your house."

"Oh, thank you so much!" quipped Lulu. "I shall have my supper."

"You shall not!" suddenly quipped Lulu. "You think we aren't enough to get away from you, do you?"

"Well, three heads are better than two, even if one is only a cabbage head!" With that the duck girl picked up the head of cabbage and went home. It was the last of the Pipsqueak.

"You got away from the Bunsen burner, but you aren't smart enough to get away from me!" cried Lulu. "I'll get you yet!"

"You shall not!" suddenly quipped Lulu. "You think we aren't enough to get away from you, do you?"

The More You Say the More You Have to Say; Keep Still!

By ANN HLESENER.

DON'T you know people who never get frightened—so they say? No matter how bad the storm and how terrific the lightning or the wind they don't seem to care. However, they do a great deal of thinking about their bravado as if they were repeating it to assure themselves. They all have a lot to say about what they would have done under different circumstances, or what they would have done in the other person's place. They forget that the best way to judge what you can do is to consider what you are doing. You have done or what you will do in a different thing.

The person who witnesses a thing and will ride you, and the cabbage head, to your house."
